Turbo Overdrive OD-2 MIJ vs. MIT ?

by Basco » 30 Jan 2012, 14:56

Hello,

This is my first post on this forum. I was looking for this information on Bossarea forum but could not find it...

I need to know- has anybody compared side-by-side BOSS Turbo Overdrive OD-2 made in Japan vs. the same pedal made in Taiwan? Are there any differences in the sound?

Tnx

Basco

There is no changes to the circuit. So they should sound the same.

The only difference you might hear is component drift in the parts but that should be minimal.

There is no known sound difference between a Japanese OD-2 and a Taiwanese model.

But there's a HUGE difference between a MIT OD-2 and an OD-2R! It is way louder and has the right amount of volume boost when the Turbo mode is engaged. Plus, it has a remote jack that rocks!

So which one is my favourite, heh?

I had Japan OD-2, sold it six months ago and last week i got myself again Boss OD-2 but this time Taiwan production.

Well... I dont' know is it psychological or what but it seems to me that Japan OD-2 sounded little bit fatter. Too bad i could not compare them side by side.

I guess values of components are the same but maybee different type of capacitors were used?

Or not?

Yes and no they are the same type. But probably made from a different company. But i can probably say one part or several drifted to a lower value. Overtime the caps and resistors can change value over the years, not much but it you get one that moves a lot or a few they move a little one pedal can sound differently then another.

I've compared the two side by side. They are the same. Component drift may add a little flavor here or there but nothing to worry about.

You can have 2 brand new pedals from the factory and they will have subtle differences to them but will generally sound the same.
