Serial Number - #10200 - Not in the decoder?

QUOTE

by fuzzbuzzfuzz » 22 Oct 2016, 14:01

Hello all,

Just flipped the lid of a silver screw BOSS CS-1 expecting 9600 or the like, but was surprised to see 10200. No dice with the serial decoder. Anyone come across the same digits and/or have the date?

Thanks.

No idea. It's an ink stamp in the regular location?

If it's a printed one then it's likely that a number has rubbed off. There's a few 6 digit serial numbers printed in the old 4 digit spot, I've got an SD1 with the same scheme.

I'll
Double check - It's the old fashioned type inside at the back in ink.

In all the research that was done for the decoder there was never any mention of a 5 digit serial scheme. And the 4 schema's provide a full range of dates to present day.

My guess is there's a number missing.

Putting a 0 at the start or end of the serial yields 1980 or 1981 which sounds about right for a SS CS-1.

odd..

It's got the older style enclosure (the bubble Boss logo) and a black switch.

confusing one for sure.

Well I do have three CS-1s!

I should really use them more to be honest.

Very interesting.

There's no doco around that I know of that covers 5 digit serials. Hence the decoder not knowing what to do with them.

Do you have any more info on these pedals? ie rough manufacture/sale date? It might be an extension of the 4 digit scheme but I'd want some supporting info before saying that for certain.

For now I've taken a guess that it's an extension of the 4 digit scheme and coded that into the decoder.*

As before some other supporting info would be great to validate the assumption.

*I haven't capped the top range so you can get some crazy dates out of it currently if you put in really big numbers.

I actually just found out another Aussie has a BF-2 with the same serial as me, 10000.

So far what I've seen:
Silver Screw CS-1 - 10200
Silver Screw BF-2 - 10000 (x2)
Silver Screw TW-1 - 10000 (I have this on the way to me, pic below)
The TW-1 is the small font version.

I really am going to have to check my serials a bit, I'm sure I've come across the odd 10000 before but thought little of it.
