The New BC-2, no mention here yet!!?

by visserman » 19 Jun 2012, 11:06

http://www.musicradar.com/news/guitars/ ... dal-497127

Only discovered this a few weeks ago brousing through a guitarmagazine.
Amazing that there has been no mention of this on the Forum so far. Similar to the RC-3 when that came out, I also found out quite late as there was no mention of it on the old Bossarea forum.

Are people only looking for vintage than? Just a quick look at the new pedal thread seem to confirm this.

Anyway, it is a nice touch to the Fender and Marshall pedals from Boss. All we need now is a dedicated Mesa Boogie pedal

visserman

Re: The New BC-2, no mention here yet!!?

by Pepe » 19 Jun 2012, 11:13

At the gone Bossarea forum, Laurie said it sucks. I haven't tried it myself yet.

Pepe

Re: The New BC-2, no mention here yet!!?

by natthu » 19 Jun 2012, 11:42

I have not actually heard anything good about it...
The apparent lack of awesomeness this pedal has seems to have stunted any discussion of it.

natthu

Re: The New BC-2, no mention here yet!!?

by Laurie » 19 Jun 2012, 14:41

The_Doc and I both found that if you have fret-buzz the software generates nasty artifacts.

After both of us reporting that, it kinda sank in this community.

Laurie

Re: The New BC-2, no mention here yet!!?

by Pieces Of The Night » 19 Jun 2012, 20:40

I've read that the BC-2 is basically a Vox in a box. I haven't had a chance to try one so I wouldn't know.

Pieces Of The Night

Re: The New BC-2, no mention here yet!!?

by BearBoy » 19 Jun 2012, 21:22

Think it's supposed to model an AC30 isn't it? Never tried one so can't comment on whether it comes close to achieving this.

BearBoy

Re: The New BC-2, no mention here yet!!?

by Pieces Of The Night » 19 Jun 2012, 21:26

This is what the Boss page says on it:
http://www.bossus.com/gear/productdetai ... rentId=254

British Combo-Amp Tone and Beyond

The new BOSS BC-2 generates a classic “AC-inspired” British combo-amp tone in a compact pedal, but that’s just the starting point. With a single knob, you can instantly control a variety of sound-character parameters, and quickly tap into a full spectrum of tone. Achieve the perfect vintage sound or dial into higher gain or cleaner tone across a wider frequency range than the classic amp could provide on its own. The BC-2 also offers a natural and dynamic response to your picking nuances at any setting. This easy-to-use yet technically complex pedal takes you from authentic vintage tone to expanded new-generation performance and sound.

Pieces Of The Night

Re: The New BC-2, no mention here yet!!?

by Zerksies » 19 Jun 2012, 22:58

Well cosm stuff has not been favored much bye boss purist in this site. But i thought i was funny when i ran the FDR-1 through my 66 Deluxe Reverb.

Zerksies

Re: The New BC-2, no mention here yet!!?

by mjd78 » 21 Jun 2012, 06:54

I have one. It is more of a collector's item. It sounds ok though.

mjd78

Re: The New BC-2, no mention here yet!!?

by visserman » 21 Jun 2012, 09:28

> Pieces Of The Night wrote:
> I've read that the BC-2 is basically a Vox in a box. I haven't had a chance to try one so I wouldn't know.

That's right and because most Boss dirt pedals mimick Marshall and Marshall and more of Marshall I think it is a nice touch. Does it sound good? I do not know, have not tried yet, but just the idea of having Vox in a box I think is good.

Boss does have one Vox in a box, it is the XT-2, you can get Vox sounds from that, including other sounds, will take more tweaking that a dedicated Vox pedal such as the BC-2.

Isn't any discussion good about any pedal? There are many times a lot of people do not get on with a pedal whereas other people may enjoy using it.

Did not know the BC-2 was already mentioned on the older Boss forum, some of you must have been early, very early indeed!

visserman

Re: The New BC-2, no mention here yet!!?

by RandomP » 09 Jul 2012, 23:38

> Zerksies wrote:
> Well cosm stuff has not been favored much bye boss purist in this site. But i thought i was funny when i ran the FDR-1 through my 66 Deluxe Reverb.

You can't say something's funny and not say the punchline!

RandomP