I've got one. I like mine. I like to have the color knob at about 2:30 or 3:00 o clock. you get distortion with a little bit of overdrive flavor thrown in at that setting.

I guess you could although when fully in the overdrive setting it still sounds a little bit more distortiony then overdrive to my ears

It has a nice overdrive sound. I prefer the OD-2R though!

I've reviewed this pedal a while ago... here it is:

I like mine - sort of RAT-like on the full distortion setting (to my ears)

I like mine. It sits on a BCB-30 with a DS-1 (MIT) and an OD-3. The OS-2 sounds a bit thicker than the DS-1 and has more gain than the OD-3. The OD-3 is more "transparent" for the lack of a better word. I run my color knob about 1 o'clock on the OS-2.

I like the OS-2.
its fake-sounding but in a cool way.

I like it with color all the way towards OD.

Nirvana used that pedal a lot on their In Utero-album.

I think it is basically a SD-1 and DS-1 in one box that can be mixed together at various levels.

Never seen only one picture of Cobain using the OS-2. Always was the DS-1 (until nevermind tour), then the DS-2. Even on the In Utero booklet you can see the DS-2 in one of the pictures.

And he used a Sansamp pedal on the tour, not sure if he also used it on the album, though.

oh ok.
I read somewhere he used it on In Utero but that might have been wrong then.

I think the OS-2 is a great pedal. I'd use it as a main dirt on a smaller board.
