Ugly little duck #1 - your favourite MT-2 settings

EDIT QUOTE

The MT-2 has a huge fanbase - and at the same time it is hated by the same amount of people.
Some have tried every possible setting and still don't like it. And others are too unexperienced to get the right tone out of it (although the mid eq is childishly easy to handle in my opinion).

So I thought that we collect our favourite settings and say what we're using it for. Maybe that's good information for some users to get the best out of their pedal.

Here is my favourite MT-2 setting (stock model):

Solid hard rock sound
Can be used for everything - power chords, solo lines, complex riffs. I use it with a Fender Stratocaster and a Marshall tube amp.
You can also roll off the guitar's volume with very nice results.

What are your favourites?

I Love this pedal i used 3 pr 4 of em over the last 15 years, They are great when combined with clean tube amp and the dual mid controls are genius. But Alas I now get my distortion from tubes... But my first tube amp was maybe 13 years ago, It was a red bear tube amp made in russia and it was single channel. But when kept clean the MT-2 and that red bear running into an oversize Trace Elliot with Vintage 30's was a beastly roar and nice and tight... Great Pedal! I might still have on lurking around in my house somewhere!

STOP!! I'm trying to sell mine and get rid of the G.A.S., but this way I can't! heheheh
MT-2 is a great pedal when you know what you are doing with the EQ. Unfortunately, most people don't understand it and get horrible results from the pedal.
My favorite settings are really close to Pepe's. The differences are: Mids at 9 o'clock; and Mid Freq at maximum. With the gain backed up a little, it's great for your all around distortion and with the gain between noon and 2 o'clock, it's good for some hardcore and "lighter" thrash.

EDIT: This pedal reminds me when I started to play guitar. It really brings back good memories from that time, the first band, playing on friend's parties... Guess that, even if I sell my MT-2, at some point I'll buy another one. It's been 13 years since I started to play and I could never "get rid" of this little pedal.

Not related to settings, but don't forget this...
