You don't want an OD-2! It's a joke in comparison to the OD-2R volume-wise!

Two folks want an RC-3? I'm selling mine Postage to Germany isn't that much !

For me at the moment... I think any Boss Delay makes the list. I'd also like to try a Skreddy Lunar Module, but not until I've bought a new guitar &/or amp

My "top ten pedals I do NOT own" list:

(Again) a second KORG ToneWorks 301 dl Dynamic Echo (I sent one of these to natthu in the last CPEWT round)
BOSS BF-1
BOSS DM-3
BOSS FZ-2 (had one - want it again!)
BOSS HM-2 (had one - want it again!)
BOSS RE-20
BOSS SYB-5
Seymour Duncan SFX-10 Déjà Vu Tap Delay (Digital/Analog hybrid delay!)
nearly anything built by Laurie (except the HZD Boost and the OD-1 clone)

AND... a KORG Mr. Multi! Even more after seeing this old ad:

Any tubescreamer, I never owned one either.
MXR phase 90.
Sansamp paradriver DI.
DOD meatbox, those seem like a lot of fun.
Boss PQ-3b, the only brown bass pedal I never owned.

These are the pedals I have not yet owned but would like to:

Jack Deville Mod Zero
TC Electronic SCF
Diago Little Smasher (it's an amp but in pedal form so I guess I can include it here)
Strymon El Capistan
Okko Basstard
EHX Ravish Sitar
DingoTone Phaser (not sure what the name is going to be yet)
Barber Small Fry
Devi Ever Silver Rose
One of those tiny Malekko pedals just because they are so cute....

Mono is alright. Level trim is great! No resonance isn't.

What does the wave shape do?

(And what about a "hidden feature" on the PCB? Leave a trimpot for resonance there?)

Re: the "top ten pedals you do NOT own" list

by tunghaichuan » 10 Dec 2011, 16:05

It's not just pedals, amps guitars, you name it. I've owned several desirable Silver and Blackface Fender amps (Pro Reverb and '67 Tremolux respectively). I also had a few ESP, Fernandez and Tokai strat copies that I let get away. They killed any current mass-produced Fender strat. But the big one was my Jim Kelley FACS amp. One of the first boutique amps. Mine was a rare model with a cane grill and hardwood cabinet. I had to sell it to meet the rent. It broke my heart

As for the above pedals, I bought most of them cheap, when they were readily available, sold them at a slight profit, but there is no way I could afford to replace them. So I settled for an MIT DD-3 and a reissue TS-9 to replace my MIJ DD-3 and TS-808.

It should sound terrific, since all the pedal circuits have been designed and made by KORG! A shame that the analog delay in the upper left isn't available as a KORG unit as well. The single Yamaha pedals are the same as the KORG 1-series.

That pedal looks far more advanced than any of the computers depicted in the original Star Trek series (which basically seemed to consist of a big button, 2 or three lights and a slot to insert some sort of big chunky disk). Using that pedal as a prop would have made Star Trek look far more believably futuristic....

More of a Realism with the pennies + "the ones that got away" (in no order of merit or whatnot)

1. MXR Original block font Phase 100 (it was there for three weeks, sounded like heaven but no cash by biggest mistake!)
2. MI Audio Pollyanna (combines +1, -1 and -2 lovely)
3. Roland BOSS CE-1
4. EHX Polychorus (big box)(Its in the shop but theres no cash again!)
5. SG-1 naturaly
6. Dan Armstring Blue er thingy - the on guitar mount fuzz.
7. Guyatone Tremolo VT-X I think, the big orange one with the 12AX7 tube.
8. ZVEX Lo-Fi Loop Junky, mmm FX weirdness for fills, like!
9. ZVEX Fuzz Factory - never had one, will ilikely build a clone
10. Mk1 tonebender or Maestro fuzz the germanium one.

Of course there are a mental amount out there but I think most of the above are achievable given luck and cash

It's been a while. In the meantime I managed to get another 301dl, an FZ-2 and an HM-2. Plus three DingoTone pedals (CSF, FDD and GHF). I'm not GASing for the DM-3 anymore since I have two fabulous KORG KAD-301 Analog Delay units which sound fantastic in true stereo. Now it has shrunk to:

BOSS BF-1
BOSS RE-20
BOSS SYB-5
DingoTone BSD
DingoTone LGP
DingoTone LGP Stereo Version (if Keane finds the time to build one some day)
DingoTone VFZ (do you know if Keane will produce further VFZ's, Laurie?)

and still the KORG FK-2 of that cool ad you can see above!

The list has changed again. I finally purchased a KORG FK-2 Mr. Multi which is still at Dirk's home till he sends me the parcel of the CPEWT7. And natthu pointed me to the Mu-Tron Bi-Phase clone of Prophecysound Systems, which makes a stereo LGP obsolete. So these are the ones I still really want to have:

BOSS BF-1
BOSS RE-20*
BOSS SYB-5
DingoTone BSD
DingoTone LGP
DingoTone VFZ
Dreadbox Square Tides
Prophecysound Systems Pi-Phase
Seppuku FX Pitch Monster

*Although some professional people at sequencer.de say that it has less in common with the original Space Delay - they told me that I should purchase a KORG Stage Echo instead, because these sound better and have more versatility. Well, let's see if I can find such a bread box for a reasonable price one day.

Pepe

Re: the "top ten pedals you do NOT own" list

by Mully » 06 Mar 2014, 10:33

the dynacord units were called echocord.... Echolette was a brand name (now owned by Bosch) tape echos that haven't been properly serviced and/or don't have a fresh tape installed will always sound lofi....
nothing wrong with sounding lofi

Mully

Re: the "top ten pedals you do NOT own" list

by Franzoni » 06 Mar 2014, 14:12

Yeah that seems to be the recurring theme with a lot of things i read on the net about original tape echoes....maintainance..cleaning and demagnetize the heads etc etc.

I saw a pick of Scotty Moores gear on the net somewhere (i think i might of posted it over on the old Bossarea forum)) and he was using a DD-3 and a CH-1 into a couple of Classic 30's...i'd imagine the CH-1 was to try and do the modulation effect of an old tape .....

I think a lot of guitar players and musicians like lo-fi thats how a lot of boutique makers are making a lot of money trying to recreate that sound with tape sims and in the case of Fulltone a real tube echo unit.....i saw Buddy Miller who plays with Robert Plant in his Band of Joy using one in stereo getting some really wacky and cool sounds out of it....and of course the Echoes of the Past downloads that a lot of Hank Marvin fans/Surf players are using with the old Alesis Quadraverbs,Yamaha Magicstomps and some of the newer Zoom units....

Spooky - that list is on par with my own thoughts - at least half

BOSS SG-1
BOSS CE-1
BOSS DM-2/DM-3
Roland Bee Baa/Bee Gee etc
EHX Polychorus or Mircrosynth
Any D.A.M ha! The Fuzzrong - quite possibly the only fuzz I've heard absolutely nail that 60s vibe Colorsound Power Boost - in fact if anyone could send one of those new D*A*M/Castledine 400 pound replicas my way I`d be really quite chuffed!
A wah that does Hendrix - and I mean DOES! RMC Picture wah perhaps.
Maestro FZ-1A
Ace Tone Fuzz, any

Odd topic - but fun.

I've had mine for a while now, and I gotta say it's fairly disappointing.
Maybe mine's a bad example or something, but it is horribly noisy... noisier than the demos I've seen (and I'm not talking the 'noise' it's supposed to make).

well they are saying that it is noisy by design because they liked the sound of that delay chip (which is known to be noisy)
I'm fairly happy with my Memory Lane (which is as noisy as the DM-3 or the DM-2) only drawback is that it's quite easy to distort the delay when really hitting the strings on a clean sound (nothing a compressor or distortion pedal won't rectify though) but it simply sounds LOVELY still a shame cuz I really liked the look of that Caroline pedal

These are the pedals I still want (in no particular order)

1. Boss OD3
2. Catalinbread Dirty Little Secret
3. Catalinbread Jimmy Page Royal Albert Hall (RAH) Overdrive (HiWatt emulator)
4. Mesa Throttle Box
5. JHS Superbolt (Supro emulator)
6. Digitech Whammy DT
7. Dunlop Rotovibe
8. ISP Decimator G-String
9. Catalinbread Galileo (Vox + Treble Boostemulator)
10. Tech 21 Boost Fuzz

I used to have a Line6 Flextone and then a Vox AD-120VT. I loved the versatility of these amps and am trying to put together a pedalboard that will give me the same versatility with a real tube amp. i already have all the modulation, delay and reverb pedals that I need, plus a few ODs and distortions. I plan on routing everything through a Voodoo Labs MIDI Looping system. I also need a Tremolo pedal, but have not done any research or demos to help me figure out which one will be best for me. I almost bought a TR-2, but am thinking that tap tempo would be nice. If Boss ever put out an analog TR-3 with tap tempo, I would buy it, but if they ever get around to issuing a TR-3, it will likely be digital, based on Boss' recent releases.

I was interested in the Fredric version a few months back, but the Catalinbread is interesting because it's got a wider range of controls.

It's worth checking out the Catalinbread link if only to watch the demo - it's just great (and the pedal sounds pretty awesome)

Damn that Catlinbread sounds good!! Plenty of poke, Sabbath esque yet pysche too.

Very well built and executed pedals, a top company - if only I had a money tree....

I thought the Barber UNlimited covers everything the other LTD pedals do?

Re: the "top ten pedals you do NOT own" list

by Mully » 14 Apr 2014, 18:23

nope..... it's a slightly different beast.

the Unlimited is a midgain pedal with its own beautiful voice. the LTD is a low gain pedal and the silver version "supposedly" has a very sweet eq section.... I think it simply looks nice.

Those are cool. I have to admit, as silly as it sounds, one of the things I like about the old school Interfax unit is that it looks like a Dial Up Modem or a commodore 64 disk drive or something.

My old list from for reference sake....

Jack Deville Mod Zero -> Lost interest in this one, plus they seem to have disappeared.
TC Electronic SCF -> Had one. tried it. It sucked.
Diago Little Smasher (it's an amp but in pedal form so I guess I can include it here) -> Bought one, was decidedly underwhelmed.
Strymon El Capistan -> Best purchase ever. You will have to pry this thing out of my cold dead hands.
Okko Basstard -> I stopped playing bass in a situation where this pedal would be useful.
EHX Ravish Sitar -> Would still love to try it, but I know it's increadibly niche and I wouldn't really use it... can't justify a purchase at the prices they command.
DingoTone Phaser (not sure what the name is going to be yet) -> The LGP. Love it. It is one of the few pedals which stays on my board.
Barber Small Fry -> Never ended up getting one. My dirt needs are covered by other pedals so I really don't need it.... if I ever find one cheap though...
Devi Ever Silver Rose -> Pipe dream. Very few exist and they were super expensive to begin with. I doubt I could justify the price I imagine one would fetch if I found one.
One of those tiny Malekko pedals just because they are so cute.... -> Had a few. Great pedals. I liked them, but didn't really need them. I have however still got a Chicklet, which is a killer spring emulator.

As for my current list... (off the top of my head):

1) Strymon Deco
2) EHX/Sovtek Civil War Big Muff (don't really need it as such, I have a Tall Font, which is basically the same effect, just want it).
3) Genuine Klon. I know it's mainly hype, but curiosity is strong with this one.
4) Chase Bliss Audio Warped Vinyl. So expensive it has to be good. Right?
5) Roland AP-5. For interest's sake more than anything.
6) Tech21 GT-2 Sans Amp.
7) Boss RC-1. Just because it's new... and I kinda like loopers...
8) Something made by Wampler
9) Something made by Diamond.
10) EHX B9

I'm sure there's loads of others that could easily be subbed into that list, but fortunately there's nothing I feel I desperately need at the moment...

The Seppuku FX Octave Synth is pure awesomeness! I'm glad that I found one. I'm already working on a demo.

Time for an updated list:

BOSS BF-1
BOSS DM-2W
BOSS RE-20
BOSS SYB-5
DingoTone pedals in general - I hope that some pedals will be reissued
Dreadbox Square Tides
Earthquaker Devices Bit Commander
Prophecysound Systems Pi-Phase
Red Panda Particle
Seppuku FX Kompakt Kassette

And a pedal out of these that nails the VOX AC30 sound to replace my sold KORG ToneWorks 105od (this one has bad digital hiss in the signal path):

Bearfoot Emerald Green Distortion Machine
Carl Martin AC Tone
Catalinbread CB30
Tech 21 Liverpool

If some of you have tried any of these four pedals I'd love to hear your comments about them.

Pepe

Re: the "top ten pedals you do NOT own" list

I had a Joyo pedals AC tone for a while, which is alledgedly a clone of the Liverpool.
Since I never tried a real AC 30 I wouldn´t know how it compares, but I do know that it sounded really great.
I can only imagine that the real Tech21 pedal sounds even better, knowing their reputation for high quality gear.

Re: the "top ten pedals you do NOT own" list

The list changes every year. I was able to find a few of the pedals above. And today a guy in Philadelphia picked up a cheap DingoTone BSD for me and in the next few days I will receive a Seppuku Kompakt Kassette for demo purposes, so here we go:

BOSS BF-1
BOSS DM-2W
BOSS RE-20
Catalinbread CB30
Dreadbox Square Tides
Hotone LUSH (not on the market so far)
Musitronics Phasor II
Prophecysound Systems Pi-Phase

The list has shrunk and I have problems to name ten pedals. There aren't so many pedals out there anymore that entice me. At the moment my GAS level is very, very low.

Mine

Strymon Timeline (had one but had no use for it. Still a very nice pedal!)
Vox Delay Lab
Boss RE-20
Pearl Phaser
Fender Feedback pedal
Korg G4 Rotary Sim
Strymon Moebius
Coloursound ToneBender
Shinei fuzz
Reuss RF-02 Repeater Fuzz
