Dingotone pedals....who's using them...?

by Franzoni » 25 Nov 2011, 23:09

My main three booster/dirt pedals are all Dingotone at the moment....really digging the the BLD as my main 'go to' overdrive although i'm using one of the fuzz pedals as well for thickening out some lead sounds....the HZD is rarely off if ever.....sort of drifting into modern country/rock with some blues and the BLD is ideal for those tones ...it's as good as the crunch channel on my twintube that was my main overdrive that i used for many years without the power supply reliability issues and the noise.....twintube was gettin' a bit noisy as well especially on the lead channel plus it's a LOT smaller and lighter than the twintube...my pedalboard has gotten remarkably smaller lately.....

Anyone else rockin' with Dingotone...?

I'm really looking forward to giving them a go in the future, but at the moment I'm really have with my guitar > amp tone So much so I'm selling most my pedals to fund more guitars The demos on YouTube of the BSD make me smile Some day, I assure you...

Hey Franz, I'm back from holidays tomorrow and while away I've been thinking about my setup (I also picked up an SQO from Laurie on my travels)....
I'm thinking of doing a massive overhaul and re-evaluation of my gear, much in the style of DasBeef's pedal shootout.
As part of the re-evaluation I am going to try an all DingoTone pedalboard and see how that goes...

Like yourself, at least one of my HZD's is always on already... that's a definite keeper. I was also lucky enough to hear a breadboard version of the new phaser Laurie has built and it is sublime! I can't wait for that one...

I'm awaiting an SQO, I intent to use it as a guitar solo booster in front of my Double Drive pedal which is a fullrange OD pedal into my amp.

A Dingotone HZD is always the first pedal in my chain these days for my live rig, I wouldn't sound the same without it now.

I'm expecting a shipment of some more Dingotone goodness soon and I'm sure that they will also find a place in my set up. I'll report back.

I have a GFZ off the board before my tuner (i.e. first) and a HZD on a 14V PS at my amp input (i.e. last)

I run the GFZ first as well then the wah both off batteries....the board is really small these days with the HZD,BLD and then the LS-2 with the BOSS stuff in the LS-2 loop...DD-3 X 2 and the TR-2.....thats it except for a small yamaha tuner i plug into tthe spare output of the LS-2....

The board is so small you couldn't fit your TU-12 anymore?

Thats the sound Doc...a Tele or a Strat with either a clean sound for traditional country twang like Albert Lee.... or the more modern guys like Brad Paisley,Vince Gill,Keith Urban use a a dirtier,more gritty sound..not filthy but with a bit of bite .....Brad Paisley uses a Dr Z based on some of his old 60's Vox amps with a good few pedals....a compressor or the HZD with a bit of slapback delay with get you in the ballpark and you can always use a good overdrive or the drive channel on your marshall with the gain dialed back a bit.....

I'm trying to get that hybrid picking thing with the plec and the fingers going on...usually the plec gets ditched for the fingers..... but i'm going to stick at it a bit longer.....

I just received one of Laurie's SQO pedals, and all I can say is, I love it already!
With it's midrange bump it's great for guitar solo booster in front of an already distorting tube amp.

Needless to say, the combination SQO-Double Drive-Marshall is quite overwhelming.

Greatly recommended.

Re: Dingotone pedals....who's using them...?

If you want a boost that will drive your tube amp, get the HZD. If you want some proper dirt added, get the BSD. If you want some more dirt, get the FDD.
If I was you, I'd buy an HZD and a BSD, from what you're saying you are looking for.
I was playing that very combo last night with a '72 Custom Tele I had been thinking about trading. Sounded so good together that the Tele is off the trade list. Basically, Dingotone saved my guitar! On the downside, it means I'll probably just have to buy the Cobain Mustang. Oh well.....

I've got a couple, and they are Things of Beauty.

But a couple isn't really enough. If I shut off my electricity, I could afford more, but the Amps need that 120 Volt AC...

Dear Mr. DingoTone,

Through this letter of appreciation, I'd like to tell you I'm impressed by one of your products in a little blue box called the FDD - Fat Dingo Distortion.
First of all thumbs up for the Canadian post who actually got your product delivered on my doorstep within a week. Knowing their more than tortoise speed history, I'd say, well done, chapeau!
But the more important thing is of course my satisfaction of your product, the FDD pedal.
Never in my career have I heard nor played with a distortion pedal that came so close to sounding like an actual amp. It made me re-check several times if I hadn't by accident selected the amp's overdrive channel, but it was in fact your pedal.
Matter of the fact is, experience tought me most distortion pedals sound shrill, like bees in a jar if you will.
Therefore I never enjoyed using distortion pedals, until this very afternoon when I used your product for the first time.
But it will certainly not be the last time, I guarantee you that, Mr. Dingotone.
As with all my previous purchases, I will spread the word amongst fellow musicians about how fine your products are, so that in the end we can all enjoy DingoTone products.

With kind regards,

Another satisfied customer.

I'm playing my Tele a good bit lately and am using the HZD and the BSD as well....great combo....

The BSD driving the crunch and lead channels of the Twintube classic is also a great sound..

The SQO is also great at pushing a Big Muff. Drive at about 9 o'clock is all it takes to really light up the Muff.

I guess I can chime in now...at least as an owner.

FDD and HZD finally arrived today (I guess Canada Post and German customs are to blame equally for the delay - I didn't have to pay any fees, though...)

I haven't had a chance to hook'm up yet, but I will tonight.

All I can say as of now is that the looks build quality are awesome.

The BLF/BLD circuit was shelved and the BSD came from a different evolutionary path.

The BLF circuit will be (at least partially) ressurected inside a new dirt pedal that is under development.

Well, what can I say...

I needed an all-purpose distortion pedal and I guess i got one now. I played that thing for two hours straight - what astounds me the most is the versatility of it. There's some serious tonal range in there. The FDD's a great pedal, really!

Been playing my GHF and VFZ without the buffered TU-2 infront of them. So much better dynamics and touch control. The only ting I sometimes like infront of them is my Crybaby. I love the 'almost' controllable droning as the circuits obviously interact. Far Out! Hours of noodling by myself!
Still loving my BSD - not touched another OD since getting it. Waiting patiently for my new super pedal!
