I see Graphtech saddles! I love those, can you spot 'em on my guitar and 2 of the basses?
They're great.

Also, awesome sunburst LP.

Re: show us your guitars!

by durango95 » 13 Dec 2011, 06:17

Thanks Dirk!

Yah i see the graphtech on your guitar and basses now! I personally think its a great upgrade for any guitar! The tuning stability of that strat increased ten-fold with a graphtech set including the string trees, nut and saddles. Still sings and has loads of tone!

That strat is also loaded with DiMarzio something or other pickups... been a while I forgot LOL. The Bridge is really hot tho, its a stacked single coil. Master Volume that is 500k when the Bridge pickup is selected and 300k when the other pickups are, Neck Tone, Bridge Tone with a Push/Pull to turn on the Neck pickup.

Re: show us your guitars!

It's a monster guitar...this is one of the originals not the reissues all original including the original yamaha case..this guitar just oozes quality from the minute you pick it up.....i have this nearly as long as i have my white strat so i reckon at least 20 years.. at the time i actually went out looking for a good tele and came home with the SG.... ....It has coil taps on the tone pots for the S/C sound..this guitar covers my on/off Gibson LP cravings..i'm more of a Fender player but when i want that big,thick Robben Ford/Gary Moore type sound this is what i pick up.....

Silverburst & Fireburst LPs just look like animals. Absolutely gorgeous guitars

Here's my lil collection as it is at the moment... Steve Vai Ep9 acoustic, aptly named Stevie USA American Standard Telecaster called Joanne! And the newest addition... A G&L Tribute Legacy which still doesn't have a certain name, but I'm going for Jess/Jessica at the moment... It just feels like a Jess I used to know... Really smooth I'd gladly recommend any of these guitars atm... I've had the EP9 & Tele for over 5 years now and they're amazing. The EP-9 is hands down the best acoustic I've played and heard.

Psyd, my main guitar. An Ibanez GIO from 97-99? Customized both inside and out.

80's MIJ Fender Squire Strat. Got it for free!

Crafted in China Fender Squire Tele Affinity

A Jay Turser Mosrite copy. A very well built guitar with crap electronics. Hope to upgrade this someday.

A Vinci Signature Bass.

My Baritone project. Currently it has a 29in scale neck and, well you see what it needs.

Lastly my acoustic. She has a magic about her that can pull song after song out of me.

I should mention, it isn't always like this in the Laurie household. The Dano was a crime of opportunity - found on Christmas eve for a couple hundred bucks. THe gibson is for a major milestone birthday. Trust me, on a regular birthay its always good, but much less interesting

I am in the process of reducing and modding my collection to pre-decided specifications.... It's a long drawn out process.

As of right now two of my guitars are 'finished', one more is just waiting for parts to join them as 'finished'. The other 30 or so.... well eventually I'll get to them/sell them....

Some just need a string change to Flats and an appropriate set up.... If it's sunny at all this week I'm going to start taking detailed pictures of my 20 or so 'outgoing' guitars for selling purposes.

My other 'finished' guitar:
Fender Thurstom Moore Jazzmaster (just one lonely mod; I changed the stock knob for an HM Strat knob)

Fender Japan '69 Telecaster TL69-SPL

I should note that as fantastic as it looks on the outside (and it really is fantastic), the electronics are junkyyyyy. Super thin wires, tiny pots, etc. - par for the course with a Japanese Fender apparently. I have some new pickups ready for installation (Curtis Novak's, alnico2, unpotted, just the way I like them), as well as some Rutter's brass compensated saddles, and now I just need to choose some pots and caps as well to get it sounding as good as it looks.

Yep, that's often the case with MIJ Fenders. Excellent build quality, rubbish electronics (or at least electronics which don't seem to be anywhere near the quality of the woodwork).

I'm currently trying to decide if I should gut and re-wire my Ventures Jazzmaster with new pups, or whether I should just leave it stock.

Sclitheroe, sad to hear it's so crappy on the inside.
But a good upgrade never made a guitar any worse!

Well crappy is a relative term, it plays and sounds fine. I'm always the weak link in the chain

That being said, I do appreciate good tone, as everyone here does, and I know that its going to sound even better with high quality pickups and better supporting hardware (I'm especially interested to see what the brass saddles do for it), and it'll be even more appealing to play. I like the sound of Alnico II, and I can't wait to hear what the unpotted single coil versions are like, after having used the same configuration in humbuckers. Honestly, single coils have been a huge revelation to me, I'm quite enamoured with them even stock. I'm also planning to leave off the treble bleed it shipped with stock - I like the bit of darkness you get when you roll down the volume.

All of my guitars have had a little bit of my blood, sweat, and solder burns (fingers, not guitar) baked into them, this one won't be any different

Fender Ventures Jazzmaster:

It arrived a few weeks ago, but I haven't had time to take decent pics yet... so this is all you're getting for now:

It's a little bit of a beater, but it was a lot cheaper than the other examples I've seen for sale on eBay (there's one currently listed for $2,900ish!!!)

This is an oddball MIJ Jazzmaster.
The upper controls have been omitted and the route has even been changed to accommodate a pickguard which is shaped much more like a Strat one at the top.
The finish is a bit hard to see but it is basically "black burst" so you can see a little grain on parts of the guitar.
My first pearloid pickguard (I usually don't like them), and I love the B&B neck with matching headstock.

I'm not the biggest fan of gold hardware but I think it suits this model.
There's also a matching Ventures Stratocaster and Jazz Bass to go with the Jazzmaster.

You must have known I'd approve this guitar, and that statement.
The Strat-ish guard is weird, but in a good way.
Great score!

New bass day, I bought myself a brand spanking new acoustic Fender bass guitar, and it's just too cool, sounds great, and makes excellent decoration for the living room! 😄

Really cool looking.

I haven't found a reason why I should need an acoustic bass. Last weekend we received a cheap but decent acoustic bass in our shop and I tested it for a while. Yeah, it sounds different, but if I had the choice, I would go for the real thing: an upright bass.

I almost bought one myself a while back... probably a good thing I didn't though. I doubt I would have found the time to become proficient playing it.

...but it would be cool...

My one remaining guitar. It survived the cull because of the neck and the versatility.

1989 HM strat. Allegedly made in the USA, but really all the parts were made in Japan and cobbled together in the USA.

Scale length is 25"

I rewired the electronics to vintage Gibson spec. The orange-drop cap is ... nice. Smooth.

Pickups are:
- Dimarzio PAF 36th anniversary bridge
- Fender Texas Special middle
- DiMarzio Chopper neck

When the coil-tap is engaged the pickup outputs are all very close. The Chopper is a magic pickup. Excellent body for a mini-humbucker.

I've had the back of the neck re-finished in two-pack. Very smooth and fast now.

I've had the Kahler pivots replaced with new pivots - much better tone transfer.

It screams 1980's, but I love the thing.

Chopper
Texas Special
PAF 36th

Time for an update!

Everything is Fender(ish) at the moment.
I do have a few other guitars sitting around, some of which aren't Fenders, but they'll all be going soon...
I also have a few guitars not pictured which are currently awaiting some work to make them usable.

My Offsets...
L to R: '62 AVRI Jaguar / Elvis Costello Jazzmaster / Bass VI RI (MIJ) / Thurston Moore Jazzmaster / '73 RI Mustang (CIJ)
Back: Am Std Fretless Jazz Bass

My non-Offsets:
L to R: Highway 1 Tele / Partscaster (Highway 1 Body + 50th Aniversary Cabronita Neck) / Partscaster (Warmoth Body + '65 AVRI Jazzmaster Neck) / Am Std Tele / Partscaster (Warmoth Body + Highway 1 Neck)
Back: '80s Stratocaster XII (MIJ)

Basses staring at the sun:

The acoustic Fender, great living room bass.

The main electric, Fender usa Precision with Dimarzio pickup.

The Fender Duff McKagan bass, with Seymour/Duncan pickups.

Fretles bass Palmer FB-05, made circa 2005 in indonesia, sold on internet via Germany. I found it in a music store, used, in 2009.

I put Seymour Duncan SSB-5 pickups, added stickers, removed tone knob and plugged the two volume knobs to direct output. And the time did the rest (marks, dirt, ...).

The pickup cover is from an old Eko Manta bass and I had it since I began to play bass, and while it's too small to fit the bridge on this 5 strings bass, it's like a lucky charm and it covers a piece of the neck which is not colored.

Doesn't the B-string hit the cover when you hit it hard? It looks like a very unusual place for a cover.

Dirk

Re: show us your guitars!

by Kulten » 27 Dec 2016, 23:09

No it's OK. As I said it's part of a lucky charm, part of "I-like-cover-on-bass" and part of "this thing covers a part of the wood with is not painted". Weird, I know, but OK in a sense.
