NGD - Gibson ES-339

I need to take a better pic but haven't had time so this'll do for now.

This my engagement present from my fiancée.

I've crossed over to the dark side away from the safety of Fenders. I've never gotten along with LP's but the ES's have always caught my eye and I haven't put this one down since playing it in the shop and bringing it home.

Looks like a great combination! And I wonder what you'll receive when you two marry!

That's pretty sweet guitar / pedal / amp combo right there...

My guess is a Gretsch White Falcon

Yeah the cut back rig with just the VFZ is always fun.

If there's a White Falcon in the house it'll probably be hers first not mine ...but then i'd have to teach her how to play guitar, which isn't all bad. I'd prefer a Silver Falcon anyway.

Oh and it's not an engagement present apparently, it's a 'fscking dowry'

This should be the new tradition, the woman gets an engagment ring and the man gets a nice guitar. How come nobody thought of this sooner?

That's what I got from Mrs BB. Although the ring was significantly more expensive than the guitar

Congrats on the new guitar and the engagement Skugga

So, what's the verdict on the 339?

It wasn't actually an engagement present rather an early wedding present. The actual deal was she gets the rock and when I finally 'go through with it' I get something of equal(ish) value. However this one appeared locally and was exactly what I wanted at an amazing price.

It's been locked away for a couple of weeks while we snuck away and actually got married (much to many peoples surprise) so now I can call it what it actually is.

But I finally got it out again last night for the first time in a while, and I'm still digging it.

The semi hollow combined with the PAF's sound awesome together. And while up high I still prefer a Strat or some other 25"/25.5" scale guitar this knocks it out of the park for rhythm and mid neck work.

Plus it's just damn pretty to look at
