Help! I'm seeing double....

by DasBeef » 26 Apr 2012, 14:19

No wait! That's not another S-100! It's an S-90! IT NEW GUITAR DAY!!!!!
Off to see Ryan Adams in Glasgow with my dad and drink lots of these....
Shall post more when I get the chance!

Nah, eBay. Need to give it a proper once over tomorrow. How much do you think I paid?/would you pay?

Beef.... I'm here to help....

All you need to do to stop seeing double is pack one nicely and send it to me. That should fix your vision problems...

£406.01 + £20 p&p perhaps ?

I have no idea what the specific price range is for these but that seems reasonable to me. Good score.

Looking forward to hearing some more about it. Enjoy !

As always natthu thanks for your help. I think I will pass on your advice on this occasion!

Nice eBay stalking!
Yeah, the trouble with these old Guilds is there aren't many in the UK to find out what they are worth, or what they are changing hands for. I got my S-100 from GuitarGuitar in Edinburgh for £600. The only other S-100 I've found in the UK is a deluxe, and the shop wants £1600. The only difference is a Bigsby? Seems steep, or my one was cheap.
These Guilds from the 70's really are well made and play like a dream. I know I'm shooting myself in the foot a bit by saying this as I'll just get more competition for buying them, but if one comes up locally, go check it out. The S-100 is still by far the best playing guitar I own.

Anyone else on here got any?

Gorgeous looking guitars mate super-jealous over here, anything SG, or SG-esque is droolworthy for me lol. Great find!

I'd honestly say ignore the SG's and get a 70's Guild S-100 with the HB-1's. It's just everything a guitar should be.

I honestly hope that day will come when I can get my hands on one

Fantastic score, two of a perfect pair!
I am curious about the subtle sonic differences..paper in oil caps needed in both if they don't have them already!

Did you see Jools Holland last night Beef? Have you been lending out your Guilds? One of the Soundgarden guys had one on their second number - tuned down I think and sounded huge on our new TV sound system

Kim Thyail is the reason I got interested in Guilds. I love his green one.
Never saw Jools, but I'll be checking it out on the OD service now!
