NBD - cheap is the new black

by Mully » 19 Dec 2014, 23:13

I needed a bass for recording purposes and found this bronco bass with a lovely discoloured pickguard call me crazy but the pickguard colour was a strong selling point for me.... never liked the white pickup/white pickguard combo

Mully

Re: NBD - cheap is the new black

by Pepe » 19 Dec 2014, 23:31

Cool! I didn't know the Bronco bass. Interesting pickup.

Mully wrote:
call me crazy but the pickguard colour was a strong selling point for me.... never liked the white pickup/white pickguard combo

That's why I love the combination of my Stratocaster: white pickguard and aged white pickup caps. Together with the maple neck it looks like it was intended that way. I wouldn't like to have pearl white pickup caps instead.

Pepe

Re: NBD - cheap is the new black

by Mully » 20 Dec 2014, 10:10

the pickup is a standard Strat pickup and it sounds good.

Mully

Re: NBD - cheap is the new black

by Dirk » 20 Dec 2014, 12:27

Doesn't it hum since it's single coil? Pretty much like the very early '52 Precision basses?

Otherwise, good choice. Squiers are good value for money.

Dirk

Re: NBD - cheap is the new black

by Mully » 20 Dec 2014, 14:10

yeah - I paid €90 (and got a leather strap thrown in) the humming isn't so bad especially since I don't use dirt pedals or heavy compression settings on bass.

Mully

Re: NBD - cheap is the new black

by Guga Ramone » 20 Dec 2014, 20:22

Cool bass! I think the aged pickguard looks lovely!

Guga Ramone

Re: NBD - cheap is the new black

by natthu » 20 Dec 2014, 23:22

Those Squier Broncos are surprisingly nice to play. They are only $200 new here - which I think is a pretty good bargain. I've been thinking about buying one as I currently don't have a 'normal' bass.

natthu

Re: NBD - cheap is the new black

by Mully » 21 Dec 2014, 09:08

yup it's the short scale length I guess... it's very easy to play....

Mully

Re: NBD - cheap is the new black

by Sinom » 30 Dec 2014, 02:20

Just go with the "mojo" !

Sinom